Great Chicago Fire

The Great Chicago Fire burned from October 8 to 10, 1871. The fire killed up to 300 people, destroyed roughly 33 square miles of Chicago, and left more than 100,000 residents homeless. Almost from the moment the fire broke out, various theories about its cause began to circulate. The most popular and enduring legend maintains that the fire began in the O'Leary barn, as Mrs. O'Leary was milking her cow. The cow kicked over a lantern (or an oil lamp in some versions), setting fire to the barn.

Today

Chicago's South Loop continues to improve. More and more efforts are being made everyday to create a community that people are happy to be a part of. Through the best and worst times, the South Loop continues to see progress.

The Century of Progress International Exposition was the name of the World's Fair held on the near South Side Island from 1933 to 1934 to celebrate the city's centennial. The theme of the fair was technological innovation over the century since Chicago's founding. More than 40 million people visited the fair, which provided for many jobs for Chicago and the nation then in the midst of the Great Depression.

Chicago Ski Jump

There once were skiers. Fieldman is currently cold. The handful of times it has home hosted Tournament -- a featured a wooded crashing through, plus ice skaters in the 50-yard line. Tournament was, and 1954.

Forever observing,
yearning to encounter
that one moment of the extraordinary.

Extraordinary Explanation

Design, Photography and Architecture share the same goal: creating moments of extraordinary experience. As a designer can create a moment of extraordinary experience, so a photographer can create a moment of extraordinary experience. And as an architect can create a moment of extraordinary experience, so a photographer can create a moment of extraordinary experience.

Searching beyond to find the extraordinary in the ordinary requires observing and recording forms and how they are created. Looking past what the eye sees can reveal a more complex experience and sometimes, just sometimes, it all can result in the most dynamic and unexpected perspective. Finding the moment of extraordinary experience is the moment of the extraordinary. And observing the extraordinary is the moment to find such moments.
